Introduction

Human interests are a phenomenon that exists in social life, which continues without interruption, and determining its boundaries is somewhat difficult. The emergence and development of interests leads to the emergence of new and new facets of interests. The development of these interests creates factors that positively or negatively affect the essence of social development. In the process of development, the existing needs of a person and society form a system of interests, and the realization of interests also creates new needs. Therefore, where there is a need, there is an interest, and where there is an interest, there is a need.

When analyzing the vital interests of society and man, it becomes clear that all processes occurring in the life of society are carried out on the basis of the existence of various interests and actions aimed at them. The essence of social stages in the historical development of society can be based mainly on the essence of interests and the conflict of interests. In the process of development, economic, social, political and spiritual interests had a real impact on the way of life of mankind. In this regard, the following thoughts of Helvetius are noteworthy: "If the physical world is subject to the law of motion, then the spiritual world is no less subject to the law of interest" [1;132].

Research methodology

Interest is one of the important principles of primary importance in the life of society and human life, and is considered one of the laws that determine the characteristics, goals and directions of cultural development. Consequently, in historical development, these principles are of great importance in implementing the actions of states, territories, regions and other people based on various interests. In the development of society, both personal interests and social interests coexist, and have manifested their essence according to the characteristics of space and time. Social interests are a harmonious and generalized expression of personal interests, scientifically proven and have become the main means of organizing the national interests of society. According to R. Pletnikov, "behov is the satisfaction of social needs as a necessity that is formed in the course of social life. Also, according to B. Iminov's definition, "Interests are a reflection of the activities of individuals, social groups, classes, and other strata that occur in social practice” [2;32].

The fact that young people have their own interests in social life also has a socio-philosophical meaning. The essence of the interests of young people is reflected in the ontological foundations of their rights, in the relationship between society and young people, the state and young people. Without the interests of young people and their practical realization, their value in society becomes an unrealistic concept. In the process of living as an important social group worthy of attention in the life of society, young people have high value for the state and society. In turn, young people should also have high rights and interests in understanding their own and others' value.

Analysis and results

The realization of the interests of youth in society is a specific principle of socio-political reforms, which is a process associated with the establishment of new principles arising from the millennial philosophy of social life, social culture, mentality, natural and demographic situation. The implementation of these principles in society is of a systematic nature and reflects the vital interests of the state and society. Due to the high level of provision of the youth factor, unstable situations in society have been prevented, and an important stage of democratic renewal has been entered. President of the Republic of Uzbekistan Sh.Mirziyoyev “Today the life itself makes it an urgent task the most important goal, which is reflected in our Constitution – the issue of comprehensively ensuring the human interests” [3;14].

In modern conditions, the realization of the interests of young people, the improvement of their anthropological, axiological and sociological essence, and the improvement of their position in society are of great importance in ensuring the stability of the system of youth - society - state relations. In the era of democratic changes in society, ensuring the interests of young people and the full realization of their natural rights remain the most important activities of the world community. The increasing number of global problems clearly demonstrates the importance of methodologically substantiating the socio-philosophical essence of current and future important tasks in solving situations related to ensuring the daily needs of young people at a high level, satisfying their socio-philosophical needs. worthy status in society.

The philosophy of the processes of ensuring the interests of youth, by its very nature, has a positive impact on changes in all spheres of social relations, is of great importance in determining goals and objectives in ensuring the interests of the whole society.

Mechanisms that have a positive impact on the realization of the youth factor, based on the rich experience accumulated over the years in improving human interests, are of great importance. The principle of the social state plays an important role in ensuring these processes, that is, in this sense, the process is understood as a process associated with the orientation of the state's important policy to the interests of youth. According to N. Kondratovich, “A socially based state means that the economic and social rights and freedoms of the population and the corresponding obligations of the state are enshrined in a constitutional framework” [4;80].

At the same time, the principles associated with the strategy of social development in society are associated with the practical manifestation of ideas and concepts for ensuring the interests and well-being of young people.

The day-by-day acceleration of the process of integration of our country into the world community is a prerequisite for the gradual improvement of state youth policy. An important criterion for the implementation of these principles is the priority of modern approaches and the innovative factor. This situation requires further development of work in this direction, the use of all opportunities in this regard. Currently, many measures aimed at increasing the youth factor are associated with the implementation of scientific and technological measures in the social sphere.

This serves to ensure the social interests of young people in society, to implement social justice, and as a result, to ensure the general well-being of the population in society. A high level of youth factor in society is the comprehensive protection of their rights and interests, high social security, the level of consumption of material goods and services, living conditions, etc.

Professor A. Saitkasimov emphasized this, "Continuously ensuring a stable environment in the political, social, economic and spiritual aspects of society is an important basis for the future development of our country. This process creates an important basis for ensuring the interests, rights and freedoms of citizens, and for more effectively organizing a prosperous life in society, ensuring its viability" [5;184].

Conclusion/Recommendations

The systematic improvement and stimulation of socio-economic processes and innovative activities related to ensuring the social interests of young people leads to the practical manifestation of principles related to the consistent development of society.

These principles may be as follows:

- that youth are an important and promising social group that is self-improving and manifests itself in society on a hereditary basis;
- that ensuring the rights, honor and dignity of youth is a priority task in ensuring social stability;
- that ensuring the well-being and vital needs of youth has become the most important direction of positive changes and reforms leading to social progress in society;
- that continuous improvement of the education, health and employment of youth is the most important principle of social progress;
- that comprehensive support for youth is considered an important factor in national development and cultural civilization.
